ITINERARY

Day 1: Srinagar to Sonmarg

Altitude: 2,730 m | Time taken: 3 hours drive

Begin the first day with a drive to Shitkadi Sonmarg's main lodge from Srinagar and wander about the mesmerising Kashmir. The route passes through farms and towns nestled between lofty mountain peaks. Driving alongside the sparkling, continuously running Sindh River will be your constant view. You can pause along the route to take in the scenery of these mountains and meadows and camp out at scenic Shitkadi, encircled by snow-dressed mountain peaks. Acclimatise to the starry night at Shitkadi and relish the lip-smacking snacks with a hearty supper.

Day 2: Sonmarg to Nichnai

Altitude: 2,730m to 3,505 m | Time taken: 6.5 hours, 9 km

The second day of the Kashmir Great Lake Trek will take you to the next campground. This part would be a gradual ascend. Tabletop, a stunning plateau encircled by jungle that opens up to the Thajiwas Mountain Range, will be your first visit. It offers a broad, fascinating view of the Sonmarg region's complete mountain range and gives one a glance at the renowned Amarnath Peak. We will then hike over to Nichnai, crossing through a section of forest and continuing along the river channel; the path opens up and gives way to high mountains. Our trek captains and guides will guide you in crossing the creek.

As you hike further toward the campground, the scenery gets more and more stunning. The path is lined with maple, birch, and pine trees and has some rocky areas as well.

Day 3: Nichnai to Vishansar Valley

Altitude: 3,505m to 3,650 m | Time: 5.5 hours, 13 km

The gradient of the day is moderate, with long hours of walking. At Nichnai Pass, we'll stop for a short break; interestingly, this particular pass comes right after the river stream. When you reach the slope just before the summit, you will be able to see the lovely valley below that you just travelled through. There is a gradual ascent to the mountain; so, remember to stop regularly for hydration breaks and maintain a steady speed.

The mountain descends steeply and rugged towards the lovely valley below. Wildflowers grow in abundance in the field below. One will be delighted and happy as they stroll through this peaceful field. A vast expanse of mountains to the left and right can be seen as one looks around. Such is the beauty of nature that while one side of the mountain range would appear rugged, the other side is snow-capped.

Campground can be arrived after a few kilometres of strolling, after crossing the river. The campground is close to the majestic Vishansar Lake's water tributaries. There are many different species of trout fish in the river, all of which are well-known in this region. However, it is not permitted to fish or capture fish in this area. One must possess a valid fishing licence issued by Kashmir's Fisheries Authority. After arriving at the campground, take your evening refreshments and unwind by the lake.

Day 4: Vishansar Valley to Gadsar

Altitude: 3,650m to 3,810m via 4,200m Gadsar Pass | Time taken: 8 hours, 16 km

Gear up as it is a longest and interesting, yet most difficult day of the journey. The incline ranges from easy to challenging. You will cross over the highest altitude of the trek, that is, Gadsar Pass standing tall at 4,200m. Early in the morning, your journey guide will set you up for the day. Within an hour of the journey, one will be able to see the trek's first and finest feature. Look at Vishansar and Krishansar Lakes, two beautiful lakes that are peacefully and pleasantly situated next to one another. The lakes are well-known for their clear waters and thriving trout population. A large number of various coloured trout can be seen swimming around. These two lakes, each of which has a distinct religious significance, both drain into the Kishanganga River, which flows through the Gurez Valley.

After the lakes, the arduous ascent to Gadsar Pass begins. The path is short and steep, so you need to be cautious with the gradual ascent. The climb up the mountain takes about two hours. This route is where the majority of the breathtaking photos of the Kashmir Great Lakes Trek could be clicked. Trekkers can spend some time here relaxing and clicking photos to cherish the memories later. There is a lengthy and steep descent from the mountain, so take proper caution when stepping. The descent ends at that point and extends into Gadsar field, a long and lush meadow. The meadow is wavy and breathtakingly placed between the two mountain stretches. There are various colourful blooms and plants, as well as lush greenery. The most vibrant part of this journey is the field.

Soon after that, Gadsar Lake, a tranquil lake with a blue hue, will be visible on your left. Only the Kashmir Great Lakes Trek makes frequent trips to the lake. This lake, one of the finest alpine lakes you will see on the journey, is one of the least explored because it is almost in the centre of the trail. According to legend, the Gadsar Lake's water and animals have therapeutic properties. The lake is a short distance from the campground.

Day 5: Gadsar to Satsar

Altitude: 3,810m to 3,600 m | Time taken: 5 hours, 12 km

This day's gradient is simple to mild. Before the Satsar Meadow path emerges, there is only a short ascent of about an hour. On lush greenery and a path, the stroll then becomes leisurely. The path is a mixture of rocky and grassland terrain with some water-filled grassy areas. The majority of the mountain's terrain is rocky and barren. There are seven mountain lakes in total in the region, and we will pass by one of them as we travel. The lake is stunning and provides a peaceful stopping spot for hikers. The seven lakes are one of the sources of the famous Wangath River that you will be seeing on the way going toward Srinagar after finishing the trek. After that, the trekkers will arrive at our campground, which is close to the river stream.

Day 6: Satsar to Gangabal

Altitude: 3,600m to 3,587 m | Time taken: 5 hours, 9 km

This day is moderate to difficult and starts with a patch of boulders and rocky terrain. The boulder section will dominate the day, with the hopping from one boulder to another. The path ascends until it approaches Zajibal Pass. For about three hours, there is a steep ascent toward the mountain, followed by an equally long descent. The path then ascends and lowers repeatedly before entering Gangabal Valley.

The largest of the Satsar Lakes is on the way, which is a treat to the eyes. At the summit of the ridge known as Zajibal Pass, one achieves the highest height of the day after ascending. The route is located at the height of 4000 metres. The first glimpse you get of Nundkol and Gangabal Lakes, the two lakes that makeup Gangabal Lake, is the finest portion of this route and a visual treat.

After leaving the mountain, one will travel through a small meadow with some minor inclines and declines before arriving at the twin lakes of the valley.

The melting of the glacier that hangs on Mount Harmukh provides water for both the lakes and the glacial lakes. You'll be setting up a tent next to the stunning Mount Harmukh, which is in the backdrop of Nundkol Lake.

Nearly 25 minutes separate the Nundkol Lake and Gangabal Lake. There are tons of fish in both waters.

Day 7: Gangabal to Naranag

Altitude: 3,587m to 2,271 m | Time taken: 6.5 hours, 13 km

The final day's incline is challenging. After brunch, you'll leave in the early morning. The journey descends gradually at first, then abruptly, through the forest as it heads towards Naranag, the trek's destination. Through Trunkhol's field is the slow descent. Here, in the midst of the surrounding mountains, are wavy fields and government cabins. There are numerous yellow blossoms dotting the lush greenery. The countryside spreads out far in front of you. Relax at the Trunkhol Meadow Hut, and a lot of shepherd houses made of mud and brick can be seen here.

If time permits, one can pause here and enjoy some local tea in one of the mud homes. The path quickly passes through the forest after leaving the Trunkhol meadow. Nearly 30 minutes of trekking will bring you to Butsheri Top, where a 3-hour steep descent begins. If your legs feel the weight of it, don on the kneecaps and make sure the laces are snug and at the ankle. Although not difficult or hazardous, the path is taxing on the legs. You'll start to see the homes below once descended midway. It further takes a hard descent to reach the end of the trek. At Naranag, take some rest before leaving for your destination further.
